of Urban Engineers, Inc.

The presentation will cover special project issues that need to be considered when undertaking Mega Projects in a major city like New York. It will offer a historical perspective of the World Trade Center and progress to date and key considerations that have been taken as the development of the projects have occurred. It will also address risk management considerations that are included in the project management techniques used on these major complex projects. Lastly, Mr. Connor will provide a 9/11 survivors perspective of keeping the projects safe during the rebuilding program and the continued commitment by many project participants.
